

What happened?

The Reimagining Conference was a 1993 weekend retreat where people within the Presbyterian church gathered to discuss feminist and queer issues and topics. Mary Ann Lundy was the main organizer and led a few of the sessions herself. The sessions brought empowerment and acceptance to all who attended.

The small congregation stood and clapped loudly with excitement without the rules of a general counsel.

All genders, nationalities, and sexualities.

Family was brewed in a pot and served to each person in attendance.

Finally, a place that's imbued with the energy of milk and honey

Visionaries stand at a podium and call for human rights and reform

Whispers within the institution now given microphones

Basking in the light and wonder of women

It's brilliant. It's bright. It's beautiful. —LLR
